

NEW MEXICO'S
GREATEST STORENEW MEXICO'S GREATEST
CLEARANCE SALE

Rosenwald's Daily Store News

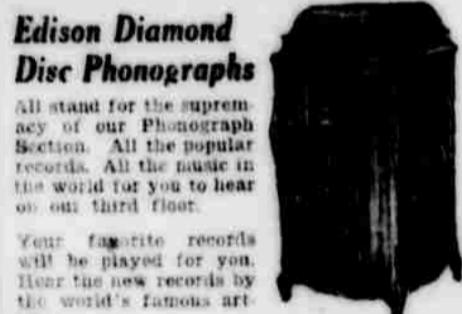

Dame Fashion's Most Beautiful Secrets in Ladies' Suits, Coats and Dresses

Not a style note has been overlooked in assembling all the approved models of the Spring season in Ladies' Outer Apparel. The same careful attention has also been given to the fabrics and no new color is missing.

So many different styles that space forbids detailed descriptions. A glance at our windows will convince the most careful observer of the exclusiveness of our styles. You will be interested in the lovely dresses, suits and coats which we are showing especially for you.

Ready-to-Wear Section, Second Floor

Victor Victrolas Columbia Grafonolas

Edison Diamond Disc Phonographs

All stand for the supremacy of our Phonograph Section. All the popular records. All the music in the world for you to hear on our third floor.

Your favorite records will be played for you. Hear the new records by the world's famous artists.

The Steinway Piano

is among the famous Pianos of the Knight-Campbell Co. Our Piano Section is on the third floor. Have your favorite pieces played for you.

A Department Reserved Especially for the Little Tots

We have strived to make this an interesting department for the little ones as well as for the interest of the grownups.

Little Misses' and Little Men's wear of the latest and modish styles. This is a little store for little folks and all to itself.

You are invited to see what is what for the little ones.

See Our Exclusive FOOTWEAR

See the newest Spring Fashionable Footwear. The new white calf Baroness and the new Trooper in grey, ivory and tan calf are just a few of the many. Other new designs in pumps are equally as beautiful. Let us have the pleasure to show them to you. Our Shoe Department a Shoe Store Itself

Noted Novelist, Henry James, Is Dead in London

Born American Citizen, Writer
Took Up Allegiance to the British Crown; Author of International Fiction.

By Evening Herald Leased Wire
London, Feb. 29.—Henry James, the novelist, died here yesterday. Henry James was born in America but died a British subject. In 1896, he took the oath of allegiance to the crown, explaining that he had lived and worked in England for forty years and had developed such an attachment for the country and sympathy with its people that he desired to throw his moral weight and personal allegiance into the British cause in the European war.

The distinguished novelist, critic and playwright was born in New York, April 15, 1843. His father, Henry James, Sr., was noted as a writer on ethics and religion; and his younger brother, William, was later to become distinguished as a psychologist.

The family was possessed of an ample fortune, the foundation of which was laid by the novelist's grandfather, of Scotch-Irish descent, who migrated from Ulster soon after the revolutionary war and became a successful merchant at Albany, N. Y.

The education of the future novelist was altogether out of the ordinary. One of its early features included a course at a small institution on Broadway, where colloquial French was supposed to be acquired in perfection, and of which the pupils were largely Cubans and Mexicans.

At other private schools, the young Harry James and his brother specialized in various studies of their early youth; and when the family went to Europe their schooling was continued under nomadic conditions, in Swiss and French day schools and with English private tutors. One year also was divided between the University of Geneva and the University of Bonn, after which James returned to New York, and in 1862 entered the Harvard law school, although there is no indication that law was ever a serious purpose. It was in fact, early in his studies at Harvard that he began to contribute sketches to the magazines and began a literary career that produced close to a hundred novels and tales, to gather with critical essays and some play writing.

Mr. James' work was never as popular in America as it was in England, but he had many admirers in his native country and even his critics ranked him as one of the most important writers of the past generation. His writings were of the analytical metaphysical school of novelists and the full understanding of his work was a matter of endless controversy. To understand Henry James, was, in the popular view, the gift of only a privileged few.

The fact that Mr. James was always independent of the need of catering to what the public wanted, since his fortune was sufficient, enabled him to adhere religiously to his own principles of romance regardless of how popular they might be. Notwithstanding this indifference he had, particularly among the English people, a host of readers who virtually formed a cult known as the Jamesians.

One characteristic of Mr. James' novels is that they often closed abruptly, leaving the reader in doubt concerning the subsequent fate of the actors in the story, where other authors would invent a denouement further to the common eye were past seeing; and in thus attempting what other writers deemed as the impossible in literary art, he developed in selected masses of verbal alchemy that were too deep for the ordinary reader. It appeared to be Mr. James' idea that a story that could be told was not much telling, and if was his choice, as one of his critics declaims, "to riskily set himself to tell the story that cannot be told."

The contractor was as to whether he was successful. He intended that it was of more interest to the author to paint the various shades in which human beings are actually thrown together than to construct an artificial composition of circumstances and he was indifferent as to whether a comedy broke down before the tragic crisis.

Mr. James is said to have originated the international novel. His scenes for stories were laid in Europe and America, and the titles show they covered a wide range of life. In the order of their appearance, some of his more notable books were "Watch and Ward," "Bodiceck Hudson," "The American," "The European," "Daisy Miller," "The International Episode," "Washington Square," "The Portrait of a Lady," "The Siege of London," "Tales of Three Cities," "The Bostonians," "The Rehearsal," "A London Life," "The Tragedy Muse," "The Legend of the Master," "The Private Life," "Terminations," "The Spouse of Payton," "What Mapple Knew," "The Two Magicians," "In the Cage," "The Awkward Age," "The Solid Gold," "The Sacred Flame," and "The Wings of the Dove."

In addition Mr. James wrote a number of books in French, which were praised by French critics as an example of most elegant use of the French language. Mr. James' work as a playwright also attracted much favorable criticism, particularly his work on "French Poets and Novelists." As a playwright he also gained some fame in his later life, one of the most recent of his dramatic efforts being "The High Bid" in which Forbes Robertson appeared in London.

In the New Year honors, which King George conferred in January 1916, Mr. James was awarded the Order of Merit. The novelist had been from the first a staunch supporter of the British cause in the European war. At the time he took his oath of allegiance to the king, in July, 1915, he was quoted as discussing the relations between the two great Anglo-Saxon peoples as follows:

"Our whole race tension became for me a suddenly consoling thing from the moment Germany flung at us all her explanations of her punitive Belgian for massacre and ravage in the form of the most insolent because I chose to damn you all," recorded in history.

"How can one help seeing that such aggression, if hideously successful in Europe, would, with as little loss of time as possible, proceed to apply itself to the American side of the world? And how can one therefore not feel that the allies are fighting to the death for the soul and purpose and future that are in us. In the defense of every ideal that has guided our growth and most assisted our unity."

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY

FOR SALE—SHADE TREES—Catalpa, White Ash and Black Locust. They are large and must be transferred at once. In order to give those desiring a number of trees a low price, we will sell at 25 cents each. Call and make your own selection until they are gone. Woodward Place, Old Town, Phone 19-1599 W. P. O. Box 588.

BODIES OF SEVEN FOUND IN THE RUINS OF BURNED HOUSE

Taloga, Okla., Feb. 29.—The bodies of seven persons were found early this morning in the ruins of a farm house, burned some time during last night, nine miles northwest of here. The dead have been identified as M. Creed, the occupant of the house, his wife, three children and his two brothers,

MAIL VAN ROBBERS GET SECURITIES OF VALUE OF $25,000

Washington, Feb. 29.—Swarms of robbers who robbed mail pouches on a passenger automobile truck last Saturday morning while en route on a trip between Jersey City and New York. Announcement of the loss of the securities was made today by the banking firm of Potter, Choate and Prentiss, to whom the securities were being shipped from Baltimore by registered mail.

COMMERCE BOARD PERMITS ADVANCES IN HARD COAL RATES

Washington, Feb. 29.—The interstate commerce commission today modified its order in the so-called anthracite coal case so as to allow the hard coal carrying roads slight increases in rates on prepared sizes on pea and smaller sizes.

Asimilino Romero, charged with peace breaking and cited also in peace proceedings, will be given a hearing before Justice of the Peace Craig tomorrow morning.